Year 6 Newsletter Summer 2 2023

Wow, what a half-term, and indeed a year, it has been! By now, the children will have received their SATs results and I hope they are pleased with their achievements. Hard work breeds its own rewards and those who put in the extra effort saw some big improvements ahead of SATs week. Good results mean greater confidence in their own abilities and taking tests in general, for which there will be many to come in their time at secondary school and beyond. However, disappointing results are not the be-all-an-end-all they are often made out to be and there is still time to make improvements if they put the work in.

We were very fortunate that half the class were able to go to St Paul's Cathedral for an amazing poetry event (courtesy of the National Literacy Trust) that saw three members of the class perform their amazing poems at this stunning landmark. Those three, along with two others in the class, will also soon become published poets in the anthology book to be released soon. They should be very proud of their achievements. Also courtesy of the National Literacy Trust, the children got to experience an incredible comic book workshop that made a real, lasting impact on them and their creativity.

Whilst we're on the subject of lasting impacts, we also have the impending end-of-year-show that we've been busily preparing for and hope the final show will be something for them to be proud of and live long in their memories. Canoeing and biking represented other such memories as well as providing some life skills in the process. We also had free bikeability sessions for some of the children that will help improve their safety on the roads. Soon we will have our celebration leavers' barbecue as well as the reward of a fun trip to Rowan's Bowling Lanes before heading to Finsbury Park for more good times with their classmates before many go to different secondary schools.

It has been a great term and a fantastic year. Thank you to all the parents who have paid for amazing experiences like Kench Hill, bowling, canoeing and biking, and for all the effort put into ensuring they have been keeping up with their essential reading and doing extra work to prepare for their SATs tests. We appreciate the effort and it will no doubt help the children to have a brighter and happier future given the increased number of opportunities their hard work provides later in life.
